

Abstract

A method for automatically adapting to statically varying packet size is provided. The method includes receiving a stream of bytes over a physical medium. A packet size is determined from the bytes in the stream of bytes. Further, the determined packet size is used to process packets from the received byte stream.